Photographic Collage

I began my formal art education while in high school, and studied in New York and Philadelphia.

During undergraduate school, I took my first photo and developed a love for photography. For thirty-five years, I focused my creative energies on photography.

Moving to Nederland in 1991, nature provided the perfect subject matter for photographs. While photography is still a love of mine, photographic collage has provided me with a new, creative outlet.

In 2017, after a very long hiatus from the world of fine arts, I began creating new works by deconstructing my photographs and then reconstructing altered photographs to create collages.

Each piece is created from photographs I have taken and then filtered using a variety of apps. Multiple copies of the deconstructed photograph are then printed, cut apart, and the pieces that will best express the uniqueness of the work are chosen to become part of the finished work.
