

Pastel Paintings by Susan Q. Foster

Susan enjoys communicating about beautiful places and subjects using her perspectives as both an ecologist and an artist. The naturalist within her, views landscapes as networks of interrelated plants and animals sustained by the energy, water, and nutrients that pass through them. All components must function together well for an ecosystem to be healthy.

Similarly, painting is a dynamic process. Like an ecosystem, a painting is successful when its elements — shape, line, color, and space — are in balance and supportive of one another.
